HOW MUCH WATER SHOULD I BE DRINKING?

The correct way to calculate ounces of good clean water you need to drink daily is to take your weight and divide that number in half. This method provides you with the correct number of ounces of water you should be drinking each day. In many cases, dehydrated people are drinking the correct amount of water, but they are drinking a poor source of water or a product with too many other additives to hydrate them correctly.

Stirwand® descriptions and suggestions for use are subjective and are not intended to represent scientific fact except for hydration and oxygenation claims that have scientific proof.

STIRWAND WATER IS STABLE FOR MONTHS

Stabilization tests show that the stirred water remains more than 99.0% stable in an open container for a minimum of forty-eight hours. Sealed containers remain stable for months, at more than 95.0% of the water's original chemical balance.
